AMBER ALERT Tanya Allan

It is the end of WW2, and the British Government investigated the use of paranormal powers as an instrument of espionage and counter-espionage, as did the other major powers.

When Churchill heard that the Russians had 'liberated' certain German doctors and scientists who had been using human guinea pigs in a death camp, he urged the British team to attempt to achieve the impossible, at least to be able to match the new enemy's progress.

As history relates, no one really succeeded, and all research funding dried up as the threat of super-brains receded when the cold war settled down to a Mexican Standoff. But when two of the gifted British team died in a car crash, no one thought of their child, conceived when both parents were under the influence of an enzyme that enhanced his parents' mental powers for a very short time.

Andrew Masters is more than gifted, he is truly unique, but his powers could prove to be either a threat or a blessing. But for Andrew, his powers are secondary to his personal problem – either to be the son of his parents, or the girl of his dreams. Andrew has the ability to transform dreams into reality – thus Amber takes her first tentative steps in the real world, while poor Andrew is forgotten.

The world is a very lonely place when one is so different, but all things can be turned to one's advantage. Helped by a wonderful woman who is as lonely as she, Amber finds her powers to become someone else come in very handy as she grows to adulthood and she finds a niche in which she can fulfill her potential during the Cold War.

The world will never be quite the same again.
